

Biotechnology and Human Dignity in the Thought of Germain Grisez

Nicholas C. Lund-Molfese, M.A., J.D.
Integritas Institute of the John Paul II Newman Center
University of Illinois at Chicago

Abstract

Reasoned argumentation has an important part to play in helping persons make morally upright choices, however it is not, and can never be thought of by Christians, as an adequate substitute for Christian hope. Modern technology provides choices for avoiding suffering and death that can be immoral. Without Christian hope it is unrealistic to expect persons to choose well even in such difficult cases.